McNICHOL HAS THE CURE.

Days of October, how gloomy and sober. Dark is the twilight, darker the dawn. How dreary I wonder where in the shadow All the life-maddened and comforted have gone. Long I've heard of you—oh! I am boarding—But you can't make me contented with death. Though I dwell on my remaining care. In at the window—making my shadow—How the full moon, so brightly and bold: How over-dragged, fine and greenish-gold. How have I been out of the cold. In the shadow, when, without reason, Full have I been out of the cold. And then I turn you just how I want you—To up in my shadow, and at night.

COIN VS. PAPER.

An Interesting Talk With General Butler on American Money.

The Utmost Nonsense to Talk of Gold and Silver as the Basis of Circulation—The Stamp of the Government Sufficient to Establish an Interchange—Gen. Butler Pays His Compliments to the Laboring Class.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

New York, September 29.—Gen. Benj. F. Butler is now in the city looking after Miss Mary Hoyt's interest in the Hoyt will contest. Your correspondent asked him if he had read Gen. Warner's compromise silver bill. The inquiry led to a long talk.

"I have not," the General replied. "What does he propose?"

"To stop the exchange of silver dollars and issue certificates on bullion," said the reporter.

"Why not on flannel?" asked the General.

"Or cotton or wheat, I hear suggested," said the reporter.

"No, they would not answer. It must be a manufactured article. Silver is only a manufactured article. It is the utmost nonsense in this world to talk about silver and gold as a basis for circulation."

About 2 per cent of the gold in circulation is lost annually by wear or destruction. I hear some fellow jump up and challenge that proposition. He will tell you there was no such gold last year and so much this year, and so much loss. I said in circulation. The gold he would count is hoarded in vaults and not in circulation. About 4 per cent of the silver in circulation is lost the same way. When a piece of coin is destroyed the man who had it loses its value. The Government also loses its value, because the so-called intrinsic value no longer exists. When a piece of paper money is lost the man who held it loses its value. The Government gains that much. We had out $46,000,000 of fractional currency. When the Government called it in $18,000,000 was missing. The Government had made $18,000,000. Now much better it was for the Government to make $18,000,000 than for the holders to lose $18,000,000 and the Government also to lose $18,000,000. They talk about gold and silver being the basis of circulation. Why, in the old days of my study of arithmetic, I was taught that the whole was greater than any of the parts. The property of all the United States is pledged for every dollar of paper or other circulating medium that it issues. The gold and silver are only a part of the property of the country—a very small part. What for is it to say that a part only of the property of the country shall stand good for the redemption of the currency when they can have all of it pledged by doing away with gold and silver altogether. If these metals were still in the mine they would be as valuable as a basis for circulating medium as now. There is no necessity for their use at all.

THE STAMP OF THE GOVERNMENT is all that is necessary to establish an interchange. It is the character of interchange ability that is most important. The money. With greenbacks for the medium of exchange, and gold and silver as a commodity, which they are, and nothing more, you might smelt them in ingots of 200 pounds and pile them up in the streets with danger, no loss by wear, no trouble and worry. The Chinese knew better than we how to put away their metal wealth. They put their coins in a box with a lock and a key. If a man is seen carrying off one of these squares he is taken where he got it. It would be the same with gold and silver or bars, but for the Government stamp. When I took possession of New Orleans there was $300,000 in Mexican silver dollars among the stores. I had a house up in the French quarter. I had a man more than one man could carry. It was stacked up in the corner of the house. I was there at all hours. There was no guard over it, but it was guarded by the eyes of the multitude. None of it was ever lost. The earliest circulating medium was a greenback. It antedated; either gold or silver.

"When was it first used, General?"

"First, let me define a greenback. I mean by a greenback a medium for the interchange of value in itself, but gets all its value from the stamp of the Government. It is the stamp of the Government that service examiners were to ask what was the earliest coin known among civilized nations. They would get the answer that the Romans used brass. So they did. But the brass was as worthless as the paper on which we print our greenbacks. The Government put on a piece of brass the image of a sheep, then that piece was worth a sheep. That is where we get our word pecuniary—from pecus. In another piece they stamped an image of an ox. This was the stamp that gave it value. Silver and gold were used for ornaments and for household articles because they would not tarnish. Silver was the most valuable because it was the least tarnishable. In only three less so. Brass coins had no intrinsic value whatever. These were greenbacks. It was not until the Romans returned from the East, that Caesar with the gold they had won in conquest that he was to be allowed to put his stamp on the gold. It was a part of his plan to enslave the people to make gold the medium of exchange. As he possessed it all, he could control the people by the medium. He was the first scheming banker on record. In the streets of Rome, under his reign, occurred the first bloodshed by labor riots. The people demanded bread. Every shallow pretence who gets a pulpit nowadays preaches some time or other on the parable of the penny. He doesn't know anything about it, judging from the way he coins it. The coins of the Empire were stamped with his effigy. Christ claimed to be a king. Caesar was a king. The people paid taxes to Caesar as king in the coin with his stamp. They came to Christ, the Jews, to get him in a hole about his kingdom, and they asked him if it was lawful to render tribute to Caesar. They thought, if he said so, to be able to destroy him for treason, but if he said yes, his claim to kingdom would be gone. But he was too smart for them. He said, 'Show me a penny.' When they brought it he asked, 'Whose head is that?' and when they said, 'Caesar's,' he replied, 'Render unto Caesar the things that are God's.' To y' remarked, 'No wonder, his head lodged there. That was all there was to it. He was crucified because he was the friend of labor and of poverty, and preached against the reign of wealth, but he was too smart to put himself into the hands of the money power by answering yes or no.

"But, General, how about foreign exchange and the balance of trade?"

"It's all humbug. Only a few million dollars of gold pass back and forth on that mission. Some or no more.

Mark this, every penny weight goes as a commodity. It goes by weight. The gold of our coinage is debased with alloy and is too coarse for their use abroad. It all goes into the smelting pot over there. The gold of their coinage is too fine for our use, and when it comes here it likewise goes into the smelting pot. It might just as well be in ingots as in coin and be sold by troy weight. This is one of the peculiarities of England's money system. That is the unit of value never was coined—the pound was a pound of silver and it was divided to make pence, shillings and shillings. There was only a small coinage of shillings. How do we get along with the French in measuring goods by the yard? Their yard is thirty-nine inches, ours thirty-six. We supply, add on or take off. They will not take our gold standard except by weight—that is a commodity. Well, if the balance of trade is against us with a nation that will only take gold in payment, we have only to go into the market and buy gold to send them as we would buy wheat or corn or any other commodity. But they no longer demand gold, they take drafts in paper. Now, I will give you a point. They are withdrawing the one and two-dollar bills from circulation—doing it illegally, too. The law declares that there shall be no greenback circulation outside of the Treasury, and when it comes into the Treasury it shall be redeemed. Mr. Manning says when the one and two-dollar bills come into the Treasury they shall be redeemed. But they are not. If he may do that with one and two-dollar bills, he may do it with five and ten and twenty-dollar bills. He says he shall not do it with any of them. Do you know why it is done? It is done to save the banks from going broke by the people into the issue of fractional currency. The banks have never issued one and two-dollar bills in the United States, except in the history. It is a story to print a hundred dollar National Bank note as a one-dollar note. The one gets a tremendous wear.

THE COINAGE ACT WAS PASSED IN 1834. The dollar notes got out and wore out in quantity. The hundred dollar note nearly, if ever, it was.

When a bank note is lost, the bank loses it as well as the individual who has it, because if the bank cannot produce it the bonds of its deposit cannot be released. They can only get more money of the Government, and the Government will only issue it on more bonds. So the bankers want to stop issuing anything less than $5. They would like to issue $10 notes.

The silver question will be prominent in Congress this winter.

"Let them heap it up, pile it all on the people, this and more, and in the end they will rise and throw off the yoke."

"Do you expect serious trouble?"

"I do. I have grandchildren who will live to see the Vanderbilt and Goulds taken out to the nearest lamp-post and hung in the most scientific and skillful manner. After there has been blood shed we shall settle down again for a while. These money kings see the danger already, but they do not see the remedy, and when I was a candidate for President Gould said 'Butler must be driven into the ground.' He couldn't see that it was better for a man with considerable wealth and a family, and property interests to be at the head of the masses and able to control them; he only saw in the background the torch of socialism and thought. Some day a real Red communist will lead these men, and then he will see the difference. Every man is a communist now in the eyes of the community who preaches the equality of man. Christ was a communist of Jerusalem. As the head of the labor element I could have secured the whole railroad question as no other man could settle it. The mistake made in running for President was like running against a stone wall. I knew that the people in all ages had failed themselves in every crisis of importance to themselves. It is the history of the ages. But I was foolish enough to think the people had grown wiser and better; that the world had progressed in the direction of human knowledge and understanding and power of concentration. I thought the laborers of the new republic were more intelligent.

THEY ARE NOT INTELLIGENT. They were afraid of me because I had a little property. They were just as foolish as Gould. But that is not all. Nine out of ten of them would sell their votes for $2 apiece. I was a fool to think that this was any different from any other. Experience has now taught me the same lesson as history.

"What about New York politics?"

"I don't know anything about them; I never saw a man who did."

GOT FIRED.

Republican Deputy Collectors Unsuccessfully Try to Do Up Their Successors.

HARTFORD, Conn., September 29.—Alexander Troup runs a good, straight orthodox Democratic paper down in New Haven. He is also Collector of Internal Revenue for the State of Connecticut. Mr. Troup is a Democrat of the old school, and when he received his appointment, he became very unpopular with his Republican deputies by requesting them to send in their resignations. Some complied with Mr. Troup's request and some did not. W. W. House and his son, of Hartford, didn't. Another deputy collector in the same district with the House was a certain Mr. Dawson. When Mr. Dawson received the new Internal Revenue Collector's pleasant little communication he resigned immediately, but not, however, it is alleged, before he had done away with certain alphabetical lists which he had made during his long term of service. Captain Case, Mr. Troup's newly appointed deputy, stepped into his predecessor's shoes with a good deal of light heart. He found certain useful articles in the shape of convenient alphabetical lists missing. Mr. Troup was notified and a vigorous investigation was begun. The upshot of the whole matter was that a demand was made on Messrs. Dawson and House to return the property which they had taken from the Government's office while looking out for Uncle Sam's interests in the "nutmeg" State. This was more than the hot-blooded Mr. Dawson could stand. He made a call at Capt. Case's office not long ago and plainly intimated that he was looking for guns. In one hand he carried a revolver, and pointing it at the head of Case, made so bold as to remark, "You are a low-lived scoundrel and a coward. You let down your pants when you see a man with a gun." He then pointed to the door and said, "Get out of here, you scoundrel." Mr. Dawson moved on one side to take a better aim at his successor's head, when that unlucky individual evaded every decided sign of life. "You sneak, if you move another inch I'll let daylight through your carcass," yelled the asperated Dawson, as he nervously twisted the trigger of his revolver. Captain Case, however, opened a drawer of his desk, and in the twinkling of an eye had the genial Mr. Dawson covered with a GOOD OLD-FASHIONED HORSE-PISTOL.

Both men glared at each other. Dawson reasoned that way: If he shot the Captain that important governmental functionary would in all probability send a bail of $10,000 for his son-in-law. Case is a wise man. He looked at his friend and decided that he wouldn't do any killing, at least not yet. Then, keeping himself well under cover, Dawson took his departure. Shortly before the interesting affair took place Mr. House, who was innocently suspended from office, was the House family clerk of Government positions, with the exception of the suspended gentleman's son. Young House followed in exactly the same foot prints as his father. It is claimed that in young House's office alphabetical lists of more or less value are missing. Mr. Troup, true to his principles of the civil service, feels called upon to suspend young House from office. As the matter looks now it is not improbable that both of the Houses, together with Dawson, will be prosecuted for theft by Daniel Webster Stanton. This is the first time the history of this nature has occurred in this State and it has caused no end of comment among the politicians of the State.

DANTE.

Canon Farrar Delivers His First Lecture in America at Buffalo, N. Y.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

BUFFALO, N. Y., September 29.—Canon Farrar of England, Archdeacon of Westminster, delivered his first lecture in America last evening before a large audience at the North Presbyterian Church. His subject was the poet Dante. He spoke with no attempt at oratory and used manuscript, to which he confined himself closely. His sentences were, many of them, 90 words in length, but were delivered with great distinctness. Of all the poets he thought of Milton and Milton alone, in any way, he compared to Dante. He divides the life of his subject into four epochs—love, philosophy, politics and exile. In the first the poet was influenced by Beatrice, and after her death he found solace in religious study. After the vision which he saw of him against it, he entered politics, at 35 became Magistrate of Florence, and at the highest point was exiled under pain of being burned alive. It was then that Dante took to poetry. Canon Farrar declared that Dante owed his greatness to a training in the school of disaster. The "comedy," he declared, had never been equalled. The bulk of his lectures was an analysis of the "Inferno," "Purgatorio" and "Paradise." He explained the allegory as illustrative of the soul. The only striking part of the learned professor's discourse was the analysis of Dante's idea of hell, which, it might be inferred, was his own idea. Hell, he said, was not so much a place of torture as a state of mind, not so much a geographical location as a temperament. Canon Farrar left for Baltimore after the lecture.

A LOVER'S FLIGHT.

Murdered by Married Men—A Child—Bride—Texas Topics.

McKINNEY, September 29.—Charles Morrison was arrested on the eve of his wedding on the charge of murder and horse stealing.

BARNES, September 29.—Bill Cotton, a colored man, was killed during the night by four married men. They went to the house where he was stopping and tried to place his head in a sack. He struggled and escaped from their grasp, and as he retreated was fired upon and killed. The cause is a mystery.

GLAVEN, September 29.—Linda E. Smith, a girl of 18, who was married a few months since and divorced shortly afterwards, was married again last evening.

WACO, September 29.—The District Attorney is directed to investigate the trouble in the Territory last week between Captain Hall of the State militia and a party of Kiowa Indians. The band of Joseph H. White, the Brazilian note counterfeiter, having been reduced to $2,000, efforts will now be made to prevent his removal to St. Louis for trial. Detective work connected with a terrible murder case is continuing. He will not leave.

REMOVAL OF THE ENTIRE BANKRUPT STOCK ST. BERNARD DOLLAR STORE, LIVE STOCK.

TO NO. 605 NORTH FOURTH STREET, NEAR THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF WASHINGTON AV.

To-Morrow Morning this GREAT SLAUGHTERING SALE will again begin, at THE ABOVE NEW QUARTERS, and will be continued until the entire stock is sold out, POSITIVELY WITHOUT REGARD TO COST OR VALUE.

For the benefit (?) of such houses here, who keep a similar line of goods to that contained in this great and valuable Bankrupt Stock, and particularly such as have attempted to do better, from attending to this, go to the effort to allure them to their own stores by endeavors to make the public believe that the most valuable goods of said Bankrupt Stock are sold out, and who, since this sale began, found their sales dwindling down and their best customers leaving them, who, to their credit, and in the interest of "self," have bought, and will doubtless continue to buy, of the Unprecedented Bargains offered in this sale, WE WILL STATE THAT SUCH AN ATTEMPT OF PERVERSION IS FRUITLESS.

REVEAL, AND WILL BE EXPOSED ON THE COUNTERS FROM TO-MORROW ON. This, in the interest of ourselves, we had to provide for, as we soon discovered, notwithstanding the big sales made daily, that we could not make a disposition of the ENTIRE STOCK in the LIMITED TIME WE HAD TO VACATE THE DOLLAR STORE PREMISES. That an assortment had to be kept in reserve (which we did), so as to have in the NEW QUARTERS as much to attract the big crowds of customers as we had in the old. Respectfully, FIVE O'CLOCK TEA.

Things bangle have the balls and require clothing themselves and are very chic, as our friends follow-clients would say. They come in gold and silver.

As the Prince of Wales is now said to wear gloves on all occasions, the revival of the kind of ornaments on this side of the Atlantic may safely be predicted.

Newest hair-powders are a clock, calendar and thermometer all in one. These are, as you know, the kind of ornaments out of which people get their money's worth.

While waistcoats, crescent-cut, three buttons, will be the fashion among gentlemen for full dress next winter. At least, the leading tailors say so, and they add that nothing is more elegant or "dressed."

The Puritan is the name of a scarf for gentlemen, already displayed in the shop windows, and probably the kind of ornaments out of which people get their money's worth.

Many fashionable ladies wear the hair in a coronet of large rings or "cort wheels" over the forehead, a style said by hairdressers to have originated with Patti last season. It is just as likely to have originated from Lydia Pinkham, another famous beauty.

Bonnet, both autumn and winter, are, if anything, smaller than ever, and fit the face snugly. Individual taste is to be shown in the settings, and the most severe, frills and anything else will run riot on milder and milder hands.

Colored glass finger-bowls are last declared "bad form," and now the most correct one for lady's festive board are of white enameled glass, very pretty and equally fragile. The enameled of last a down represents all the hired girl's wages.

Mrs. Langtry now wears four tiny curls on her forehead instead of the time-honored bang. "There was little girl who had a little curl which hung over her forehead. When she was good she was very good, indeed, but when she was bad she was horrid."

To advance American swell now has the name of his club on his visiting card, as an address, and omitting the prefix Mr. it reads: "J. DuBouche Heavyweight, Windyway Club, New York." All of which convey an idea of social distinction to the uninitiated.

Among the novelties in feminine headgear promised for the coming winter will be bonnets of Astrakhan. They were in fashion in Paris last winter, and the wonder is that they did not get across the ocean. Embroidered cloth bonnets to match hats are also to be fashionable, say the milliners.

There was a showy girl at one of the Barnato hotels last summer who had a white tail suit on the panels of which were painted scenes "from our country seat in California." Whether this certainly unique fashion will be extensively followed remains to be seen.
